Gathering in a circle, the members spoke the name of each absent brother who now is with the colors and then sang the "Star Spangled Banner." The following was read by the author, Charles E. Heath, chairman of the entertainment committee of the lodge:

Gather round, sit close.

This night is frought with meaning;
Our boys are gone, we're left behind.
Our hearts with love are teeming;
For the World's at War, Nothing new I'll admit, But this one's different, Just a bit.

Richer than gold;— Tis freedom we fight for, To have and to hold. Our Knights who are gone Are valiant and true, Earth's rarest treasure.

They'll fight the fight and see it through. From Phoenix Lodge fourteen are there Where bursting shrapnell rend the air.
There's Billings, Flitton, Fickas, Mills,
At every name my heart feels thrills;
Now Jackson, Lattle, Price and Tod, Whose feet our Castle Hall have trod— Humphrey, Heller, Smith and Price, But even these will not suffice, For there's Claude Decatur—Jones by villages. When it became evident that the Germans were coming, the girls worked frantically with motor trucks, gather-ing together all the humans in their territory. In one village they went three times to try to persuade an aged women to leave, but she refused to move unless the ancestral bedstead on which she lay could be transported with her. In final desperation the girls brought a big supply wagon and loaded the bedstead and the woman into it, leaving the village fifteen minutes be-fore the first of the Uhlans arrived.

The girls organized themselves into small units and each unit was charged with the evacuation of a single village. The story of their heroic work can be told now only in the ensemble; details of personal experiences are get lacking. "But every one of the girls is a heroine," said my informant.
